Any losses or gains do not take into consideration any costs, commissions and fees incurred by the investor in the issue and buyout of the shares (e.g. taxes, brokerage fees or other commissions deducted by the financial intermediary). If performance is calculated in a currency other than the euro, any losses or gains generated can thereby be affected by exchange rate fluctuations (both upward and downward). Management commentary

The European economy is showing resilience in a troubled context, supported by falling interest rates and investment plans. However, recent economic indicators show signs of weakness. In April, the eurozone manufacturing PMI index stood at 45.6, below expectations, signaling a contraction in industrial activity. Moreover, the composite PMI index dropped to 50.1, its lowest level in four months, indicating an impending near-stagnation of private activity, with particularly marked weakness in the services sector. Consumer inflation expectations have risen to 2.9% over 12 months, but the impact of American tariffs, the decline of the dollar, and the potential influx of cheap Chinese goods could exert downward pressure on inflation. In response to these developments, the European Central Bank (ECB) lowered its three key interest rates by 25 basis points in April, thus adjusting its monetary policy in light of the underlying inflation dynamics.
